

THE RIGHT TO STRIKE

The right to strike is a basic worker's right.

In Britain it is under threat.

In South Africa it does not exist for black workers. On average, an African's income is less than one-tenth that of a white. No African receives the same money as a white man doing the same job.

All trade union and human rights which are normal to us are denied to the African.

In Britain the Tory Government wants to sell arms, invest more money, increase trading and political links to support the white minority's apartheid policies and further exploit the African people.

Are we going to let the Tories create a British Vietnam in Southern Africa?
